monstrations and are trying to achieve our ends by negotiation." He insisted the strike was not the first grievance. Increases had been granted at Edmonton, Calgary and Lethbridge. The strike would be granted in Drumheller. He charged that the advisory committee's report on the food schedule was vague and that no one knew what it meant.

"We want a uniform rate for the province with a clear statement as to what it means," he said. "The clothing allowances are inadequate and I believe adjustments can be made in both food and clothing allowances."

Premier Browne later said that "The government is prepared to meet any violence that may arise and will not be moved by any threats."

Continuing, he said that strikes against governments went against all the laws and principles of Labor procedure the world over.

"The government is prepared to discuss all such cases on their merits but only of their merits," he said.

FOOD PRICES HIGHER

Mr. Robb contended that food prices in the Drumheller Valley were higher than elsewhere, to which the Premier replied that he had positive proof that the food purchased could be purchased anywhere in the province for less than the amount granted for the purpose.

In support of this contention, the Premier said that the scale provided for 1928 for the purchase of food under the scale could be purchased for $5.94. For a family of four, that would mean $23.76, whereas the food actually could be bought for $21.96.

He said that food prices varied considerably in the Valley. Hon. Mr. McPherson here said that the Drumheller Valley was based on the highest price vailing prices and reiterated previous statements that the food schedule would be revised from time to time in accordance with fluctuating food values.

Frank Brown said the government was prepared to and would prefer to issue relief slips for actual goods instead of cash value of tickets.

ACCEPT FINDINGS

Mr. Berg contended that the advisory committee should be recommended to consider some questions and he believed the Drumheller people would accept its findings. Other investigation were urged. He suggested a small concession which would be made.

Mr. Roper said there was much misunderstanding of the advisory committee's report. People had been told that the committee had argued that the delegation returned to advise their people to return to work pending the committee's report.

PREMIER WRITES LETTER

Premier Brownlee agreed to write a letter giving the government's answer to representations made by the delegation. But he indicated that on funds. But he indicated that the government did not propose to make any changes.

He said the government laid on a basis of need. Consideration would be taken to the question of casual earnings and administration details. The committee also noted that the CTA and said that in the last two years relief had been financed solely on "domestic and foreign borrowings." If the depression continued, he doubted if the present scale could be continued. The food schedule for Alberta was the highest in Canada, being six and one half per cent higher than in Manitoba and one and one half per cent higher than in Ontario.

It was "definitely impossible" to finance on a higher scale. He would like to see a special advisory committee go to Drumheller to alter the relief scale.

He was criticised as full of optimism. He said that the CTA in Montreal alone represented an annual turnover of $100,000,000.

ELDORADO, Ill., June 19.—Discovery today of acid burns about the eyes, wearing the same face and head of Dr. Homer L. Irt who was found brutally slain on Monday, created further mystery to the conditions surrounding the man's death.

R. S. Martin, Eldorado funeral director, reported to authorities he had been called to the scene while preparing the body for burial.

He said the body was found lying on its back, with its head tilted back and its eyes open. The eyes were surrounded by a white, powdery substance, which he said was a fine, white powder.

THE FATAL BLOW

Japan and Russia are credited with "co-operating" to kill all chances at Geneva of a general agreement on disarmament, if it can be supposed there really were any such chances.

Japan said it would have to make "reservations"; Russia said it could sign unless its "neighbors" did; and Geneva promptly sent out word that the treaty would not be signed.

Japan's "reservations," whatever they may be, would be unacceptable to Russia.

Skepticism is the dominant attitude in international dealings at present, with few countries willing to trust their neighbors or risk anything for peace.

History shows that no country has failed to record that countries which had no faith in each other ever yet made a treaty that was worth anything, or that was intended to be anything better than documentary deception.

TINKERING DOESN'T MEAN MUCH

The franchise law is being revised at Ottawa. Hereafter voters' lists are to be made up each year, and will be revised for the year.

No new names being added and none taken off during the interval.

The effect will be to shorten election campaigns. Since municipalities are not to be dissolved when parliament is dissolved it will be possible to hold an election in three or four weeks.

Theoretically this will make parliament more responsive to the voters, since there will be less trouble and expense in taking a vote. It may not mean this in practice.

The Government has not stalled an over-due election for a year because of the trouble and expense, but because it knew if it went to the country it would not "come back."

Tinkering with the election machinery will not make governments more responsive or more responsible. The way to do it is to elect members of parliament who will regard the position as a public trust, as with a vested interest in which they have been given a five year title.

IN THE SAME BOAT

Chicago school teachers have had no salary for 2 1/2 months. This month they will get six weeks of the school year, nothing else. A ridiculous situation, of course, involving no end of inconvenience and humiliation for the teachers, and raising the World's Fair as an invitation to public attention to centre itself upon Chicago.

The crowning absurdity is that the salaries will have to be paid some time, and will be paid, probably along with interest for the time the teachers have been kept out of their money.

What is needed is some financial machinery that would make the salary-money available at once, and make the public, not the teachers, carry the debt.

But before Albertans start poking fun at the "Windy City" and the state of Illinois they should note that teachers in this province also are not getting paid for their services, are rendered and as their contracts provide.

In scores of Alberta schools teachers are and have been for months without pay, not getting more than a fraction of the salaries due, and not knowing when they will get the remainder. It is time, doubt, they will be paid in full, from Government grants if the school boards cannot in the meantime collect enough taxes.

But here—as in Illinois—there is needed a "revolving fund," under control of the Minister of Education, from which school boards could get advances to pay salaries and other running expenses when there are due, and thus close the school year with no obligations save to the board or the Government.

The spectacle of a province paying full boom-time interest rates to quiescent bondholders, but refusing to back school boards so they can pay the salaries of their teachers is no less absurd than that of a city running a World's Fair and at the same time asking its citizens to finance its schools.

NO DISCUSSION ALLOWED?

Premier Brownlee says his Government cannot negotiate with the unemployed strikers at Drumheller, "because the Government has already agreed" upon the food allowances to be made to victims of unemployment and "cannot agree to change the decision," or even talk about changing it.

What goes for Drumheller of course must go for Edmonton, and all other points in the province.

"If any man will do His will he shall know of the doctrine."—John 7:17.

Allowances must be kept on a corresponding scale everywhere, and the official attitude toward discussing allowances with protesting recipients cannot be different in one place from another place. When it is said the allowances in Alberta are "higher than in any other province," that is supposed to end the matter.

This kind of diplomacy causes wars between nations. That it will convince Alberta's unemployed they are being considerately dealt with is doubtful. It closes the door to a frank consideration of three facts which the unemployed cannot overlook:

1. The cost of living has risen, and the whole influence of Dominion and Provincial Governments is directed toward raising it substantially higher.

2. Relief allowances tend to become permanent. An upward revision is not easily secured once a scale has been adopted by municipal, provincial and federal authorities, for obvious reasons. The newly proclaimed scale is intended to last through the next spring, unless the "codes" fall on the cost of living will advance considerably before that time.

3. The unemployed man is not asking for relief allowances. All he asks of other people or of the Governments is that they show him where he can get a job at decent living wages. If they cannot do that, he is not to blame. If they will not provide work for him, it is because they find it cheaper to feed him on a "dole" system.

That, after four years of doles is bad enough. But in face of the advancing cost of living, the unemployed man is told he must accept the dole that is offered or let his family go hungry. No man who has a wife and family, and is worthy of them, can doubt what his reaction must be.

Poems That Live

"A CHARGE TO KEEP I HAVE"
A charge to keep I have,
A charge to glory,
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky.

From youths to hoary age,
My calling to fulfill,
Oh, may I all my powers engage

Help me to watch and pray,
And on Thyself rely,
For I am weak and do decay,
I shall forever die—

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

This is election day in Ontario and Saskatchewan. According to the political wiseacres, the results there will have repercussions at Ottawa. I was in Saskatchewan during the general election campaign of 1920, and think the result then had important effects on the ensuing federal general election. History may repeat it.

I've been reading through Neeley's "My Life as an Explorer." Apart from the interesting account of his polar and the story of his finding of the North-West passage.

Low for as but the shallowest of boats to navigate—the most interesting as well as the most painful revelation is of the force jealousies that exist between some of the explorers.

Fiercest of all was the jealousy roused between Capt. Noble, who piloted the dirigible Norge on the flight across the Polar Sea under Amundsen and Ellsworth, and his chiefs.

Amundsen represents the Italian as suffering from ego-maniacal funk, and Ellsworth as strutting about afterwards, claiming all the glory. No jealous woman in the meanest of rivalries could equal the little Italian captain, whose status was that of a hired man.

He secreted a full dress military uniform aboard for show purposes while persuading the Norwegians to leave him and his party to go to lighten the ship. While persuading Amundsen and Ellsworth to bring only one tiny flag of the Norwegian flag to the Pole, he had a handkerchief, to drop on the site of the North Pole, Noble brought across Italian flag, one of those huge that it entwined in the polar and threatened the safety of the ship.

Amundsen thinks it was a plot to please Mussolini and give the impression of an Italian conquest.

"There's nowt so queer as folks," as they say in Lancashire.

Related horror is being done to another man in a vastly different walk of life, whose career seems to have incited jealousies in a field where the world is full of them.

A pioneer missionary work to the savage Indians of the north Pacific coast. Father Duncan and his work at Metlakah among the Tsimpean Indians has been receiving the attention of the legislators at Washington in an effort to do justice to the memory of a man who was dedicated to his life.

The alleged murder of two constables by Indians last month has attracted notice to the slumbering passions of the Indian tribesmen.

The Treatment of Low Blood Pressure

By DOCTOR FRANK MCCOY

The cure of low blood pressure consists in building up a good quality of blood, and developing all of the functional powers of the body. The weakness must be gradually overcome by proper dietary changes and the use of physical culture exercises and walking.

The improvement will naturally be slow and the patient must be constantly encouraged to be persistent in his exercise and diet if he wishes to do directly observe this serious condition.

Even though the vitality of the patient with low blood pressure seems to be low, the best plan is to start right by the use of a planning system.

Dr. F. McCoy accumulated toxins. This is best accomplished through taking a short fast, using an eight ounce glass of orange juice or tomato juice every two hours and drinking as much water as between the orange feedings.

Use the same kind of juice any one day, that is, if you start on orange juice, continue with it for the remainder of that day.

This fast should last at least five days, during which time headaches and other symptoms of discomfort may appear for the first two or three days to the fact that the body has not enough vitality to throw off the poisons as quickly as they are picked up by the blood stream.

Following the fast the food must be proportioned and combined so that the body care so as not to burden the body with excessive amounts of foods which are not tissue building.

All the vital foods, such as proteins in the form of lean meat, fish, or fowl should be combined with liberal amounts of cooked non-starchy vegetables such as carrots, asparagus, string beans, summer squash, etc., and a large quantity of raw leafy vegetables should be used with at least one meal during the fast.

The patient should be kept in bed, and to overeat under the delusion that he can increase his strength in proportion to the amount of food he eats.

The one necessary point in low blood pressure is to keep in mind the necessity of developing increased strength. Nothing seems as simple as this, but it is not so simple as it seems.

REDUCTIONS IN VALUATIONS Will Be Slashed To Reach Parity

City Man Is New Head Of Credit Trust

Reductions By Commission Force General Assessment Cut for Whole City.

Rouilly, scoring the Alberta Assessment Commission for its action in lopping $600,000 off Edmonton's land and building assessments, has been named as special meeting tonight, decided to proceed with an adjustment which would reduce assessments to a parity with the reductions allowed by the Commission.

The alderman board felt it was decidedly unfair for assessment cuts to be given property holders who appealed the valuations placed on their properties, while those who did not appeal received no reduction.

Support was therefore given to the move by Ald. J. O. Ogilvie that the city revise the land assessment roll in the inner zone throughout and in the light of decisions by the commission with a view to an equality at an equal level between those who did not appeal and those who did.

An adjourned meeting of council will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at which the city assessment will be on the best method of carrying out this proposal. Current estimates will also be considered. The alderman board will also be asked to consider the possibility of a further reduction in the rate.

In allowing such drastic reduction, an assessment of the Commission had placed the city in a financial position, according to Mayor D. C. Knott. Figures were presented at the meeting to show that the city's financial position of $2,500,000 was involved in the assessment of $2,500,000. If a reduction of 10 per cent was allowed on all land in the inner zone in order to bring assessments to a parity with the city.

OLD TIMERS PREPARE FOR BIG PICNIC

Annual Outing at Lakeview Promises Good Time for All

Preparations are practically complete for the annual Old Timers picnic to be held at Lakeview, Cooking Lake, on Thursday, according to J. A. McLeod, secretary. A picnic good time will be available for all and the festivities, scheduled to commence early in the afternoon, will continue for the night with an all-night dance, for which Bob Hovick has arranged dances and a contract of modern fox trots will be provided by the Northern Rangers.

Mr. McLeod states that a bus service is being arranged for those who have no cars of their own. A feature of the day will be the grandmother's baseball game, which is being played by the grandmothers and grandfathers. The game will be played on the field at Lakeview.

A rolling pin athletic is being arranged. Some discussion is taking place as to whether the single girls should be allowed to enter. The program of field and track events will be run off. The program of field and track events will be run off.

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHRIN

CHAPTER FOUR
"Yesterday we were the world," Chickie pined at the beach. For the moonlight on the waters. Its their turn now.
"They're too young for life," she said. "Not life they can't, but only the daze and excitement—the sound of revelry by night. Let them hear it."
"Ah, but they do want life, Janina, and long before they're ready for it."
"Why shouldn't they have it, Chickie? Why are we parents so determined to keep it from them when the flavor is new and sweet? Why must we insist they become stale and commonplace before their glory is blown to pieces, but our fool economic system and our vicious morality. Half the women in this world are partial suicides. In the name of virtue, they're killed off some of the best and soundest impulses the human animal knows. How God must laugh, or does He weep to see us burrowing like gophers into miserable, safe little holes, and refusing to look at the sky and the gallant, roaring sea?

"Ah, yes, Janina, but you want to be secure—you don't want to blaze a red trail to know, perhaps tragic gods. What mother does? Our thought may be no less, but our love is always timid."

Janina gave a short, mocking laugh.

"Still swift and still slender, Janina's face with its black eyes, prominent nose and short, sensuous upper lip was more striking than in girlhood, and still handsome. She never lost the finer longer, than it seemed her war on the smug 'good people.' But at length Janina made the great compromise to convention. One day when Pippin was a few months old she held the little girl in her lap. The child, reaching up and patted Pippin's face.

JANINA MAKES PLANS FOR FUTURE HAPPINESS

Janina's breath caught. She glanced at Chickie.

"Baby, I'm 34 tomorrow. The day after that I go and get myself a husband, and nine months from today I'll have one of these of my own."

Janina did exactly this. She married Chaffee Arnold, who had followed her with a dog's devotion from the time he was a yellow-haired, adoring boy. A year later Janina had her daughter. In two years Chaffee was dead. The girl was 15 now, fair and comely, Janina was a scrupulous mother. But even before her daughter remained outspoken and full of scorn for the hypocrisy of the virtuous.

Now, at Chickie's question, she began to muse, her cheeks flared in a slow, cynical smile.

Nothing like having a child to take the wind out of your sails. I still believe the best life and the only brave one must be free. If I were 20 today, I'd dare again to tap at heaven's gate and crash the doors of hell."

"But to say—"

The door was flung open. A gay laugh sauntered into the room, followed by Pippin and a boy.

"See, I bring my welcome with me! Don't give me an angry look, mother. I'm sticking right here and drinking up every word. Want it nice of me to fix them good little eats?"

PIPPIN BRINGS TEA TO GUESTS

She set the sandwiches and tea before her mother and Janina. Then, with a look of fast administration:

"Go on, Janina, keep talking. Good, wild talk. I heard what you were saying. I want to be free like you were. Did you really smash the gates of hell and proud of it?"

"But the fashion is dead, Pippin. We're all through with flattery, youth and girls who dare. When these years of easy money and pamperality will again become the past beyond price. My dear, I advise you to practice virtue. It's in you to return as the best seller in the market for men."

"You think men are the end and aim of a woman's existence?"

The girl raised the cup quickly to her lips. Oh, why did Janina always stir such sweet, but longing in a person's heart?

BEAUTY OF WORLD APPEALS TO PIPPIN

And what a world—enough to make one faint with the beauty of it!—if she could take Kevin's hand and walk with him now into dim poetical twilight—never a backward glance.

Her hot young pulse raced with the picture.

"I'm going to work and study. I'm going to become brilliant—exciting. So that he will love me. Lord, how can I keep him, with all the millions of beautiful girls in the world? I'll be older, I'll be away on the ship. When it was far out at sea, the moon, and I was on the water, I'd come and stand before him. Then his arms would go about me. What a dream!"

"How right Janina! Love is the only value in the world. And he is all I want—all I'm ever going to want. If only, only I can have him!"

They were all down at the pier to see Kevin off. They talked excitedly. They blinked and dabbed at their eyes.

Now the whistle was blowing. All visitors must leave.

Pippin watched him as he stood there, a flash about him and the wind blowing his black hair to curl. Some college girls who belonged to them, made Pippin slightly malignant. When the whistle continued blowing, Kevin bade them goodbye. They waved him with Pippin thought just a little startled. The wind down the gangplank, looking backward and waving.

PIPPIN WAVES KEVIN GOODBYE

"They're taking up all his time," Pippin thought, and a sense of outrage. "Why, look at Mary's eyes, the full of tears."

The next moment Mary was in Kevin's arms. When he let her go his eyes, too, were brimming.

"Goodbye, goodbye," they were all calling.

Kevin set the fur about his mother's neck and caught her hands in a final squeeze.

Pippin fluttered her handkerchief in a gallant attempt to seem careless. Her heart was choking; her tears were now and then falling time to notice each one of these. But she was included, with large, breezy affection in the general family farewell.

She turned and looked down her cheeks when Kevin pulled her to a little distance. "No goodbye for me, Kevin, dear?"

"Goodbye on her face, and like a child, turned her face up for him to kiss. She said tearfully:

"With a quick arm about her he stopped and said:

"I'm going to be lonesome, too. Pippin, I hear from you. You will promise to write and tell me all those secret passions? Do that, will you, Pippin?"

She was awed by his dark, earnest look and his eyes with the light in them. They were such wonderful, warm, smiling eyes, about smiling and staring. She thought:

"It's not going to miss me. . . . I'll die."

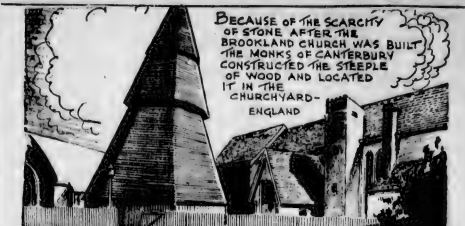

"You won't neglect me, Pippin, dear?"

He took her hand, and stopping quickly, turned to her and said:

"It dismayed her. Not impetuous and not wild with a wild young sweetness like that other time. But quick—half-stolen—as though something made him afraid."

THERE ARE THREE THEORIES AS TO THE NAMING OF OREGON - THE FIRST IS THAT THE STATE WAS NAMED AFTER A SPECIES OF WILD SAGE CALLED ORIGANUM. THE SECOND IS THAT A USQUIT PRIEST NAMED THE STATE FROM THE SPANISH WORD "OREGONES", MEANING "BIG-EARED MEN" - THE THIRD THEORY IS THAT THE NAME CAME FROM THE SPANISH "ALBA AGUA" MEANING "GENTLY FALLING WATERS".
